CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

Selling of a general character carried prices lower on the Consolidated Stock Exchange, with the business decreasing as the decline proceeded. Reaching of numerous stop loss orders added to the pressure upon the market. The main influence affecting trading sentiment adversely was the lack of confidence.

Closing house statement which was evidently causing fear of money market trouble. In some quarters renewed anxiety was also expressed regarding the political situation. The market was held up by a number of firms connected with the New York Stock Exchange. Lending rates for stocks at last Saturday's half weekly carry over had indicated the existence of an additional demand for loans.

It was evident that the market was being evidently quite willing to take advantage of the decline to secure profits. Commission houses handled a large business in odd lots. It was noted that Great Northern showed exceptional results in the decline, being up further favorable reports as to crops in the Northwest. Detailed operations follow:
